INSPIRATIONAL SITES

<http://designshopp.com/about/>

I like the banner at the top of this, when you hover over it, it pulls down. I also like the colors here.

<http://foundryco.com>

I like this one because of the clean lines and white background. The color photos are what attract all of the attention.

The scrolling in this is interesting to me. I like the parallax scrolling in this because of the subtle changes – enough to notice but not overtake your portfolio work.

<http://www.8bisbranding.com>

In this website I like how the portfolio grid is a mix of squares and rectangles. The info bubble next to the cursor when you hover over the portfolio images is really annoying to me.

<http://tiltedsquare.com/work/>

I like the large rectangular portfolio images rather than a grid of smaller squares. I also like that when you view a portfolio piece and are finished looking at it, there is navigation to the next piece at the bottom of the page. A lot of the other sites force you to go back a page to view the next piece.

STORYLAND STUDIOS

Storyland Studios approached us in late 2012 with the goal of creating an all new brand and online experience that would appeal to designers and communicate their value to new customers. Our services included collateral design, iconography, apparel, a responsive website and the coordination of branded touch points.

A laptop and a smartphone are shown side-by-side, both displaying the 'CONTACT ME' page of the Sarah Williams Portfolio website. The laptop screen is larger and shows more of the page content, while the smartphone screen is smaller. Both devices have a black background with orange header and footer bars. The contact form includes fields for Name, Email, Subject, and Message, along with social media links for LinkedIn, Twitter, and Pinterest, and a 'Submit' button.
